Bright Line Eating began as an idea in my deepest meditation—an idea to take what I was teaching in my college course on The Psychology of Eating, along with my years of experience helping people one-on-one, and share it with the masses in the form of a book. Little did I realize that the idea to write a book would ultimately take shape as the growing, thriving Bright Line Eating community that exists today! Read Susan’s Full Story. Weight loss resources. Addictive Eating. In this week’s vlog, I give you an update on my experience in Bright Line Freedom, and I illustrate how powerful and transformative it can be when you meet your Food Indulger and Food Controller and listen to what they’re saying. So make sure you don’t eat too many sweets and fast food. If this is your body type, you tend to gain weight in your midsection. Therefore, the perfect diet for you is eating little and often. That is, eat six times a day, but reduce your portions. Consume foods rich in fiber, fruits, vegetables, vitamin C, and low-fat dairy. If you eat yogurts, make sure they are those that help regulate your digestion. You should avoid foods that generate gas and swelling, such as fast food, bread, and certain vegetables. A pear-shaped body is characterized by a much larger hip measurement than bust measurement.
