Our understanding of the nature of listening and speaking have undergone considerable changes in recent years however, and in this paper I will explore what some of those changes are and what their implications are for classroom teaching and materials design. The teaching of listening has attracted a greater level of interest in recent years than it did in the past. In so doing they would develop communication strategies and engage in negotiation of meaning, both of which were considered essential to the development of oral skills. These questions guide us through the understanding of any subsequent discourse that we hear and they focus our listening on what is said about the questions. Or consider this example.
