Las Posadas is a traditional Mexican festival which takes place from 16 December to 24 December. It commemorates the search for shelter by Mary and Joseph with a series of parties around the neighborhood. In some parts of Mexico, it is a major holiday, with the whole community taking part. The choice of a different home to host the party on each night of this festival ensures that everyone in a neighborhood can participate without overtaxing any given host. In some regions, the procession ceremonially asks for shelter at two other homes before reaching the location of the designated party for the evening, in a reminder of the difficulty that Mary and Joseph had when they tried to seek shelter before the birth of Christ.
