Women and men are in separate events for more reasons than a more complex showering layout. It is because the average physique of a woman is different than the average physique of a man. It is not politically correct to say so, but men are faster, stronger, and more competitive at sports than women. The fact that men's sports is more on television than women's sport is purely sexist and the fact that men are better is completely wrong. The world is so sexist in believing that men are stronger and more powerful is so wrong and not right to think that. This means that women are getting to the point where we can compete with men physically. Now as for the use of a brain in a sport I turn my attention to fut-ball or as we call it in America; soccer.
